Minister weighs in to raging debate, as ANC brass reject plans to drastically cut routes

By CHIEF MESSAGE WRITER
BILLARD JOYCE and JANE WOODHEAD

As the country enters the state of emergency, the ANC's transport minister, Gwede Moleketi, has said the party is not ready to accept a plan to drastically cut routes. The minister said the party is not ready to accept a plan to drastically cut routes. The minister said the party is not ready to accept a plan to drastically cut routes. The minister said the party is not ready to accept a plan to drastically cut routes.

WHEN IN ETHIOPIA...

There was no fancy ceremony or red carpet as the 10th anniversary of the 2009 election of Jacob Zuma was celebrated in a quiet, intimate way at the home of the president's wife, Leah Mogohe. The event was a family affair, with Zuma and Mogohe surrounded by their children and grandchildren. The atmosphere was warm and celebratory, marking a decade of leadership for the ANC.

We can't throw R2bn every month to SAA... but still they can't survive. It's a travesty of justice

Gwede Moleketi

Moleketi is seen here in a meeting with ANC officials.
